The Soul of Prague

Prague stands at the crossroads of Europe. Its bridges, towers, churches, synagogues, gardens, and hidden passageways form a symbolic landscape where history and imagination continually meet. Prague has long occupied a space between East and West, the sacred and the secular, reason and mystery. Gothic Christianity, Jewish mysticism, Renaissance humanism, alchemy, modern science, literature, and depth psychology have all left their traces, often layered upon one another on the same streets.

Join us in June 2027 as we journey through Prague and the historic Czech lands, exploring this remarkable cultural landscape through the lens of analytical psychology. During the reign of Charles IV, Prague became the capital of the Holy Roman Empire and the home of Charles University, founded in 1348, one of Europe's oldest universities. Under Emperor Rudolf II, the city attracted alchemists, astrologers, artists, physicians, and astronomers, including Tycho Brahe or Johannes Kepler. Their search for connections between human beings and the cosmos gave rise to questions that would later resonate with Jung's ideas on symbols, archetypes, transformation, and the mysterious relationship between the soul and the universe, psyche and matter.

The Czech lands also helped shape modern European thought, art, music, literature, and psychology. They were the birthplace of Václav Havel, Franz Kafka, Antonín Dvořák, Miloš Forman, Sigmund Freud, Stanislav Grof, Josef Lada, Alfons Mucha, and many others geniuses. They were also home to Jan Amos Comenius, known as the Teacher of Nations; Gregor Mendel, father of modern genetics; and Edmund Husserl, whose work established the philosophical tradition of phenomenology.

Our journey will take us to Příbor, the Moravian town where Sigmund Freud was born, allowing us to explore the origins of psychoanalysis and the intellectually creative, and a complex relationship between Freud and Jung. From Prague's alchemical traditions and sacred architecture to the Jewish Quarter, Charles Bridge, Prague Castle, and the haunting Sedlec Ossuary in medieval Kutná Hora, this journey is designed to inspire awe, stir conversation, reflection, and imagination.

Presentations and experiential workshops will explore Czech intellectual and spiritual history, alchemy, cultural archetypes, Czech legends and fairy tales, including ecopsychology, Tantra and sexuality, psychoanalysis, and artificial intelligence. Cultural experiences will include professionally guided sightseeing, an opera performance at one of Prague's National Opera House, a Vltava River dinner cruise, and additional opportunities to encounter the history, culture, and symbolic life of the Czech lands.

Participants will stay at the luxurious Hotel Carlo IV, centrally located in the heart of Prague. This elegant historic but luxurious hotel will provide a comfortable retreat throughout the journey, with breakfast included and access to an indoor swimming pool, sauna, wellness center, massage services, restaurant, and bar. The hotel will also serve as the primary setting for our presentations, workshops, discussions, and shared reflections.

Yet, as with every meaningful journey, some of the most memorable conversations may emerge informally, in gardens and monasteries, inside cathedrals, beside the Vltava River, around the dinner table, or while walking through the ancient streets of Prague.

The program offers 15 continuing education hours through the C. G. Jung Institute of Chicago.

Please join us for a journey into the soul of Prague, in the footsteps of alchemy, legends, history, and analytical psychology.

SUNDAY 13 JUNE

Rest, Orientation, Presentation, and Welcome Dinner

Presentation by Dr. Rastislav Kučinský, MD

The morning will be free for rest and recovery after international travel.

1:00 p.m. - 2:00 p.m.

Presentation by Dr. Rastislav Kučinský. The first presentation of the week will be held in a relaxing atmosphere. The session is 2.5 hours, including discussion.

The Three Lemons: A Jungian Tale of Loss, Transformation, and the Renewal of Consciousness

Drawing on Three Lemons, Dr. Kučinský explores the fairy tale as a symbolic map of the human psyche. He focuses on the loss and renewal of consciousness, those critical moments when a person's established understanding of self and the world falls apart, creating the need to discover a new way of integrating experience.

Drawing also on his many years of medical practice, he connects this archetypal process with illness, trauma, and encounters with human mortality. The fairy tale emerges not simply as an ancient story, but as an image of psychological transformation: after a profound crisis, consciousness may be restored, not in its original form, but in a new, enlightened one.

5:30–7:30 p.m. | Program orientation and welcome dinner at the hotel

Participants will meet the organizers and one another, receive practical information, and review the program for the week. The welcome dinner is included.

The Secret Garden of the Soul

PRESENTER: DARIA SKALOVÁ, MGR.

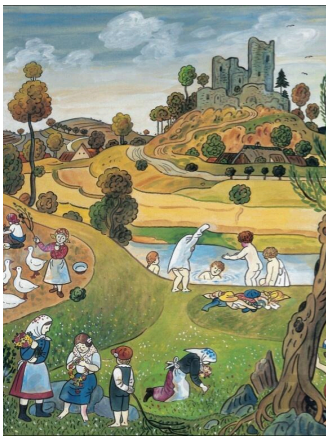
9:00 a.m.	Departure from the hotel for Havlíčkovy Sady

Estimated travel time is approximately 20–30 minutes by bus provided by the program.

9:40 a.m.–12:30 p.m.	Experiential workshop in Havlíčkovy Sady

This outdoor workshop combines symbolic walking, ecotherapy, and analytical psychology. Through mindful contact with the landscape, participants will explore the inner garden as a symbol of the psyche, deepen their relationship with emotions and inner resources, and experience the restorative qualities of nature. The group will walk through the gardens, pause for experiential exercises, and conclude with guided reflection and discussion.

Participants should bring comfortable walking shoes and clothing appropriate for the weather. Portable seating mats or blankets may be recommended. An indoor alternative will be arranged in case of inclement weather.



Josef Lada · Czech illustrator

12:30–3:00 p.m.	Break and lunch at Barka Restaurant near Havlíčkovy Sady
3:00 p.m. onward	Guided exploration of the Old Town, including Old Town Square and the history, mysteries, and symbolism of Prague's Astronomical Clock (Orloj), along with other historical sites of Staroměstské náměstí.

Fairy Tales, Jewish Prague, Alchemy, and Tantra

The Work of Silence: The Seven Ravens as a Fairy Tale of Relationship and Individuation

PRESENTER: JIŘÍ LISÝ, ING.

9:30 a.m.–12:00 p.m.	Presentation and discussion at the hotel

In Božena Němcová's Czech fairy tale The Seven Ravens, Bohdanka sets out to free her seven brothers from an inherited family curse. Their return depends upon a demanding task: she must transform flax into seven shirts while remaining silent.

The presentation approaches the story through analytical psychology while attending to its specifically Czech form and related European versions. It explores curse, transformation, journey, textile work, silence, relationship, and incomplete restoration as images of psychological development. Particular attention is given to the ambiguity of silence, as either voicelessness or a disciplined inner space in which a new attitude can emerge.

Jewish Prague and the History of Alchemy

12:00–1:30 p.m.	Lunch and break in Katr restaurant.
1:30–2:15 p.m.	Visit to a nearby alchemy museum, exploring Prague's alchemical traditions.
2:15–5:00 p.m.	Professionally guided exploration of the Jewish Quarter, including selected Jewish Museum sites and the Old Jewish Cemetery, with a stop at the Jan Palach Memorial.
5:00–5:30 p.m.	Return to the hotel or transfer to the dinner venue.
5:30–6:30 p.m.	Early dinner near the hotel.
6:30–7:00 p.m.	Return to the hotel and prepare for the evening seminar.

Jung, Tantra, and Sexuality

PRESENTER: ANDREA SCHENSOVÁ, PH.D.

7:30–9:30 p.m. | Evening seminar at the hotel

This seminar examines parallels between C. G. Jung's analytical psychology and Tantra Yoga. It focuses particularly on sexuality in Tantra and its connection to analytical psychology, including its symbolic dimensions and relationship to spirituality.

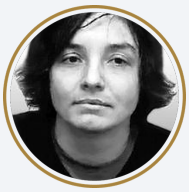
Money, Meaning, and the Machine: AI Alignment in a Symbolic World

PRESENTER: DR. MILUŠ KOTIŠOVÁ, PH.D.



9:30 a.m.–12:00 p.m.	Presentation and discussion at the hotel's Conference Room

How can we determine whether artificial intelligence genuinely helps people think, learn, and address human problems? Miluš Kotišová approaches this question through the psychology of meaning: how language, symbols, and context shape what we understand and value.

Beginning with current methods for testing language models, she considers where technical measures may diverge from human goals. She then connects computational tokens with the history of money and introduces Comenius, a comparative method for assessing how effectively artificial intelligence supports human learning. The presentation asks a question central to analytical psychology: Can information carry meaning on its own, or does meaning emerge through interpretation and lived context?

Kupka: Reflection · mountain lake

12:00–1:30 p.m.	Free time and independent lunch.
1:30–2:00 p.m.	Gather at the hotel and prepare for departure.

The Alchemy of Peace: Prague's Contribution to Alchemy and Jungian Thought

PRESENTER: GIUSEPPE M. BUFFA, M.D.

10:00–11:00 a.m. | Presentation and discussion at the hotel

The session may be extended to approximately 11:30 a.m., subject to final confirmation.

Is alchemy still a body of knowledge relevant to everyone, or should it be regarded as an ancient art with little connection to contemporary challenges? This presentation explores how operative and inner alchemy may help transform many of the psychological and spiritual difficulties facing humanity today. It also considers Prague's art and architecture as an open book of alchemical symbolism preserved across the centuries and asks whether The Secret of the Golden Flower can be understood as a practical guide to inner alchemical transformation.

Approximately 2:00 p.m. | Closing gathering and group reflection

Participants and organizers will share reflections, impressions, stories, images, and synchronicities that emerged during the journey.

Evening | Gala closing dinner

The closing gala is the third included group dinner. The venue, menu, starting time, and included beverages will be provided in the final itinerary.
